Professor recalls Wall era

By Peggy Olsen

Roswitha Brooks raced to the phone and dialed her parents in 'Turn on the television. Turn on the television," she cried, her voice cracking with emotion.

Brooks, a professor at the University of La Verne, had just learned the Berlin Wall was crumbling. After 28 years, the massive 13-foot high barrier bordering the two Germanys -East and West — was finally coming down. She was the first to inform her parents, residents of West Berlin.

'They turned on the television. Evidently, they had the same footage. We were watching the same broadcast."

Telephone lines between Germany and La Verne usually sizzle with lively conversation when Brooks calls her parents. This time, the three were overcome with emotion. "We couldn't speak."

They were remembering a conversation just two weeks

"My father said, 'Wouldn't it be wonderful if your generation would see the wall come down? Ours never will," "Brooks recalled.

"Now, today it was happening. No announcement, nothing. In the evening before

Brooks clearly remembers the day in August 1961 when West Berliners were suddenly, without warning, surrounded by treacherous barbed wire.

passage to the West.

"We were caught after about 10 days and jailed for 24 hours. They noticed us going back and forth and got suspicious," Brooks recalled. "But they could never prove anything, so they let us go."

Some East Germans lost their lives, trying to jump from buildings in East Germany into the west. Many were shot trying to flee. "At first we thought it was just temporary. But when they started to shoot, we knew they were serious," Brooks said of the East German regime.

She watched the wall "grow and grow and grow" from a barbed-wire barrier to a thick concrete wall that stretched to 15 feet in some places.

Brooks' father, a native of Cottbus, was cut off from his family in East Germany. His athletic daughter lost all contact with East German friends and track competitors.

Herbert Brooks didn't know his future wife on Aug. 13, 1961. Stationed in Berlin with the U.S. Army, he was put "on alert" and ordered to his battle station — four stories below ground in the Olympic Stadium.

"It was the only time we were issued ammunition," he said. "The alert lasted for about six hours."

But the Americans knew the wall was going up. Brooks has pictures, taken with a telephoto lens, that show East Germans stockpiling materials for the wall.

That still bothers Roswitha Brooks. "The Americans knew and they did nothing," she says.

Brooks remembers that the Americans kept her family from starving during the East German blockade that isolated West Berlin in 1948.

"We were cut off from the free world. We had no food except what the Americans supplied. They gave us potato peels for soup. We ate nettles as spinach and dandelions for salad. That kept us alive."

Brooks had moved with her parents to Berlin from Dresden, her birthplace, in 1945. "We were fortunate to settle in the American sector," she said.

Her good fortune included meeting her future husband. Despite her parents' regret, she moved to the United States and married Herbert Brooks in 1962.

The couple have visited Germany several times to acquaint her parents with their grandson, Shane.

They have seen travel restrictions loosen somewhat in East Germany, and once visited Dresden on their way to Czechoslavakia. But, Brooks said, they could never travel freely enough to locate her father's aunt and cousins. That's something they plan to do on their next trip in January.

Now an American citizen, Brooks said she nevertheless felt like "a Berliner again" when the wall began to tumble recently.

She and others in the German-American community hope for reunification of the two Germanys. On the door of her office at ULV is a sign: "One Berlin. One Germany."

But hope and joy among German-Americans, Brooks said, is tempered

Student felt kinship to East Germans in Berlin

By Peggy Olsen

Bettina Harman felt a kinship with people dancing on the Berlin Wall and frolicking in front of the divided city's Brandenburg

Elated that the barrier was crumbling, Harman had only one regret.

"I wanted to be there. It was such a freeing thing."

As an exchange student in West Germany, Harman had observed a country divided by the oppressive wall. In the East Germans, she sensed such apathy that the government's decision to open the borders surprised her

The University of La Verne senior once drove with friends toward the East German horder.

"The road dead-ended into a wall. There were red and white warning posts. It was very forboding.

Harman could see buildings on the other side of the barrier. She knew that motorists once had freely crossed the border. The experience made an impression on Harman. "To know that people at one time were going to the bakery over there, going to see relatives on the other side. And all of a sudden they were cut off."

Guards in high towers watched every inch of the wall. "If anyone makes a suspicious move, they're ready — they have the ability to kill. The feeling is hard to describe — one that is hard for Americans to understand," Harman said.

Having friends on both sides of the border added to Harman's elation when East German officials opened the borders between East and West Germany.

On a trip to Poland, she struck up a conversation with an East German couple.

At first the discussion centered on physical discomfort. "We were standing up, crammed into the car. We were 13 hours on the train."

Eventually, the couple expressed dissatisfaction with the politics of their homeland — while never discounting the fact it was their home. Harman felt "they were able to feel loyalty, while remaining critical and objective."

The three discussed the lack of job opportunities and the worsening economy in East Germany. "They felt the country was stagnant, but didn't know how to make any changes. There was a sense of hopelessless which seemed to lead to apathy," Harman recalled.

Earlier, Harman said she was involved in a formal student discussion set up by the East German government. Those East German students espoused the communist dogma and were well versed in its ideology, Harman said. "People who want education are not ones to outwardly challenge the government."

On the train, Harman found that she and her new friends left dogma behind and had a "give and take" discussion. Also, there was "freedom to talk" and "nothing to inhibit our conversation."

Harman was startled when East Germans opened the Berlin Wall. Then she realized some change had occurred since her return to the U.S.

"They were so apathetic incineration.

Their invention doesn't make the trash disappear — one ton of garbage will yield about 200 pounds of solid waste that must be disposed of elsewhere.

San Bernardino and Los Angeles county residents combined toss out nearly 90,000 tons of garbage each day which in turn is dumped in the dwindling space at area landfills.
A process that greatly reduced the volume of dump waste could extend a landfill's life for years.

Turned away from proposals for local trash-burning power plants by public outcry, officials have proposed to ship the excess garbage by railroad 200 miles east to dumps in the California desert.

Toman, a scientist at the Lawrence Livermore Laboratory in Northern California, and his engineer partners say they have

☐ ☐ ☐ ☐ Their process can handle any type of waste — even the hazardous variety, they claim.

First the trash is shredded into inch-long strips. Then a rotating dryer removes most of the water content of the shreds, and finally the garbage is sent through the distillator.

Here in the absence of oxygen, even at a temperature of 1,200 degrees Fahrenheit, nothing can burn. Instead, most material will decompose. In 15 minutes, the heat destroys what might have taken 15 years to decompose.

The shredded garbage becomes solid "char" and gas — which is burned to make

Also left over are bits of glass and any non-ferrous metals. The char amounts to about 10 percent of the original weight of the waste fed into the shredder. The gases are used to heat the distillator and to produce steam and electricity.

The char can be refined and turned into activated charcoal, which in turn can be sold, Toman said

Emissions for distilling one ton of garbage is only a fraction of the emissions for burning the same ton, according to Toman and his partners. They cite U.S. Environmental Protection Agency test data and California Air Resources Board research on trash incineration.

In comparision to a trash burner, the distillator fared better in the ARB studies than in the EPA test conducted in Canada. The EPA results found the distillator and burner technology much closer in terms of smog-causing chemcial particulate emissions.

Toman notes that no toxic chemicals known as dioxins or furans are created in the distillation process.

Proposals to build electricitygenerating trash burners in Pomona and Ontario have died a political death at the hands of public opinion.

The inland valley straddling the Los Angeles-San Bernardino counties line suffers the worst air pollution in the United States, and residents have been quick to organize to challenge municipal solid waste-to-energy plant proposals.

The same kind of furor over a planned tire-burning power plant in Rialto has created an ongoing multi-city legal action effort to stop the project.

Toman and his partners insist that their process is not incineration. They have occupied the Upland demonstration site since 1972, with one version or another of the distillator. They

Thanksgiving dinners feed the needy Restaurant lures customers in

Some Thanksgiving dinner hosts did more last week than invite the neighbors in.

Dinner guests were at a premium at one free feast in Ontario. Members of the familyowned-and-operated Pig Oute Smoked Barbecue, 2203 S.

'Every time I hear about a young child being killed by some lunatic ... It just makes me mad," Pogue said. "I just want to write the parents a letter to let them know people do care.'

Daniel was 11 years old when Horace Edwards Kelly shot him once in the chest and again in the head.

After enjoying Thanksgiving dinner at a relative's home in Riverside County, Daniel and his female cousin went to a local convenience store to buy some sunflower seeds. As they were walking back home, Kelly parked his van along the street the children were walking along, chased them on foot, caught the girl and dragged her back toward his van.

Daniel kicked Kelly and his cousin was able to escape.

Daniel tried to flag down passing motorists, but Kelly shot the boy in the chest and then, according to newspaper accounts of the court trial, shot him in the head.

Although the judicial system convicted her son's murderer, she said crimes against children continue because California's laws don't prevent a person from carrying out an act of murder.

Although California has the death penalty, it has been two decades since the state put a person to death.

Poque said she believes criminals are more inclined to commit a crime because they know the ultimate penalty See Murder/Page 7

Parents of Murdered Children helps family

Dealing with the loss of a child can be an emotional experience.

That trauma is ten-fold when the child is murdered.

Diana Brooks hopes a chapter of Parents of Murdered Children she started in Ontario last year can help the other victims of a child's murder - the family.

'We are a self-help group that tries to help people adjust to the new normal they are faced with," Brooks said.

Brooks, a Rancho Cucamonga resident, said she started POMC after moving from Phoenix.

She joined the group in Phoenix to deal with the death of her son Richard Badame. Badame, 19, was a new recruit in the U.S. Army and was killed in 1985 by two other recruits while stationed at Fort Riley, Kan.

"I came here and there wasn't a group, so I started it here," she said. "Sometimes we'll have five people other times we may have families get through a tragedy like the murder of a child.

Anderson's program is funded by the state, and her office is operated through the county District Attorney's office. Anderson said she assists victims of crime by getting them through the legal process and helping them find counseling and ways to deal with losses.

"Victims have rights and we let them know what those are and help them through the process," she said.

Brooks said that while POMC doesn't actively seek harsher punishments for murderers of children, she said the group does support lobbying efforts to strengthen laws to favor victims and not the criminals.

"The biggest frustration is when a murderer gets two years while a car thief gets 15," she said. "There is something wrong with that."

POMC has the blessing of Victims Assistance, however: It is an independent organization without affiliation with any other support groups.

Montclair officials cleaning up the town Messy yards and noisy neighbors targeted

By William Diepenbrock

Messy yards, noisy neighborhoods and scraggly looking homes are being run out of Montclair as the city enforces a series of cleanup rules, according to city staff members.

Three appearance rules were put into effect during 1989, two of which prohibit parking cars on lawns and working on automobiles at home for excessive lengths of time.

The third is a more general nuisance abatement law that lets the city attack a number of maintenance related items that can reduce an area's property

"It's made quite a dramatic improvement in the appearance of the neighborhoods, not just the parking of the cars ... but the secondary kinds of improvements," Community Development Director Rob Clark said recently

Those improvements include flourishing lawns where before they were dying, driveways where before there were none and replacement of crumbling driveways, explained Clark, who made an annual report to the City Council

"Just a lot of things seem to follow. Things look a lot better," he said, adding that a wave of heavy ticketing for violation of these rules has ended.

"We're attempting through the appearance ordinance to improve the housing stock and at the same time increasing the property value of our residents, said City Administrator Michael Milhiser

"If someone doesn't take care of their property it decreases the property value of their neighbors' (land)," explained Milhiser, who added that all three ordinances were based on residents' ideas.

Since July, more than 300 citations have been given for breaking these rules, especially by residents who parked on their

They were influenced, Harman suggested, by events in Poland and Hungary and Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev's new policies for reform.

Ontario redevelopment officials had an idea how to keep vandals out of the Gallery Theatre, but their plans stepped well beyond issuing tickets to trespassers.

The City Council's response was quick and pointed: Don't use a wrecking ball to wipe out "Immigration agents do not ask for money. If they do, they're not immigration agents," said Bridgette Helmer, director of refugee and immigration services for the San Bernardino Catholic Diocese.

Through her program, Helmer has heard of countless attempts to defraud immigrants of their money. Recently a local businesswoman told her that men identifying themselves as INS agents demanded to see her

Del Mar luxury rentals in the planned community of Terra Vista.

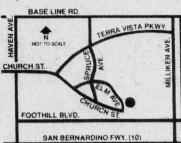

No one else in Rancho Cucamonga offers the luxury of Del Mar's Mediterranean style rentals in the planned community of Terra Vista. Del Mar is the new center of attention with its own 3,881 sq. ft. club house including weight room, full kitchen, fireplace, multi-purpose room, sauna and game room. Right outside your door there are two swimming pools, three spas, a tennis court, tot lot and picnic /BBQ areas.

Every unit has special features you'll usually find in a single-family residence like fireplace, washer/dryer and private garage.

Best of all, Del Mar is a part of a complete community with nearby schools, restaurants and shopping. Two nearby community parks provide open spaces for picnics, jogging, bike trails and other sports activities. So, if you're looking for something that's very rare, look no more.

From the San Bernardino Fwy. (I-10), take Haven Ave. north to Church St. Turn right and continue on Church (which becomes Elm Ave.) past Spruce Ave. You will see the Del Mar community on the left hand side of the road. Open 9 a.m. to 5 p.m.
